TEVA ANNOUNCES AGREEMENT ON ALLEGRA[®] PATENT CHALLENGE

Jerusalem, Israel, November 19, 2008 - Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd. (Nasdaq: TEVA) today announced that its subsidiary, Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc., and Barr Laboratories, Inc. have signed an agreement with Aventis Pharmaceuticals, Inc., sanofi-aventis U.S. LLC and Albany Molecular Research, Inc. to settle patent litigation involving Teva's and Barr's U.S. generic versions of Aventis Pharmaceuticals' Allegra[®] (fexofenadine) 30mg, 60mg and 180mg tablets including all claims for patent infringement and damages. After entering into a separate agreement with Barr, Teva launched its generic fexofenadine tablets in the U.S. in September 2005.

The present agreement releases Barr and Teva for all past and future activities in connection with the U.S. marketing and sale of Teva's and Barr's generic fexofenadine tablets. Under the terms of the agreement, Teva and Barr will each pay Aventis about $30 million. In addition, Teva and Barr will pay Aventis an undisclosed royalty on future U.S. sales. Under a consent decree related to Sanofi, the agreement is subject to review by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), which the parties expect will require up to 45 days to complete. The parties may prevent the agreements from becoming effective or terminate the agreements if the FTC or state attorney generals raise objections that cannot be resolved by the parties.
