Schering-Plough and Merck Provide Update on Distribution Agreement

Schering-Plough has been notified that Johnson & Johnson, as a result of the proposed merger between Schering-Plough and Merck, has initiated arbitration proceedings to resolve the parties' dispute over whether Johnson & Johnson can terminate the distribution agreement relating to Schering-Plough's rights to Remicade and Simponi.

While the initiation of the proceedings does not preclude a negotiated settlement, the companies say they are fully prepared to arbitrate the matter and to vigorously defend their rights.

Schering-Plough and Merck noted that Johnson & Johnson's position is contradicted by the plain language of the Remicade distribution agreement. The companies are confident that an arbitrator will agree that the Merck/Schering-Plough merger does not give Johnson & Johnson the right to terminate this agreement.

The companies noted that the arbitration process is expected to take place over the next 9 to 12 months and could be ongoing even after the merger has closed. On May 5, Centocor, a wholly owned subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson, notified Schering-Plough of its intention to arbitrate whether Centocor has the right to terminate the distribution agreement as a result of the merger agreement and proposed merger. The arbitration process is clearly defined involving a number of steps, including the selection of an independent arbitrator, information exchanges and hearings, before a final decision is reached.

Any change or termination of the distribution agreement is excluded by the Merck/Schering-Plough merger agreement from the definition of "material adverse effect" and from the definition in the credit agreements entered into in connection with financing the merger. The companies continue to expect the merger to be completed in the fourth quarter without regard to the arbitration.

Forward-Looking Statements

This communication includes “forward-looking statements” within the meaning of the safe harbor provisions of the United States Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. Such statements may include, but are not limited to, statements about the benefits of the proposed merger between Merck and Schering-Plough, including future financial and operating results, the combined company’s plans, objectives, expectations and intentions and other statements that are not historical facts. Such statements are based upon the current beliefs and expectations of Merck’s and Schering-Plough’s management and are subject to significant risks and uncertainties. Actual results may differ from those set forth in the forward-looking statements.

The following factors, among others, could cause actual results to differ from those set forth in the forward-looking statements: the possibility that the expected synergies from the proposed merger of Merck and Schering-Plough will not be realized, or will not be realized within the expected time period, due to, among other things, the impact of pharmaceutical industry regulation and pending legislation that could affect the pharmaceutical industry; the ability to obtain governmental and self-regulatory organization approvals of the merger on the proposed terms and schedule; the actual terms of the financing required for the merger and/or the failure to obtain such financing; the failure of Schering-Plough or Merck stockholders to approve the merger; the risk that the businesses will not be integrated successfully; disruption from the merger making it more difficult to maintain business and operational relationships; the possibility that the merger does not close, including, but not limited to, due to the failure to satisfy the closing conditions; Merck’s and Schering-Plough’s ability to accurately predict future market conditions; dependence on the effectiveness of Merck’s and Schering-Plough’s patents and other protections for innovative products; the risk of new and changing regulation and health policies in the U.S. and internationally and the exposure to litigation and/or regulatory actions. Merck and Schering-Plough undertake no obligation to publicly update any forward-looking statement, whether as a result of new information, future events or otherwise. Additional factors that could cause results to differ materially from those described in the forward-looking statements can be found in Merck’s 2008 Annual Report on Form 10-K, Schering-Plough’s 2008 Annual Report on Form 10-K, the preliminary proxy statement filed by Merck on May 21, 2009 and each company’s other filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the “SEC”) available at the SEC’s Internet site (www.sec.gov).
