Merger Progress Report

March Toward Merger Approval Goes On

In the midst of the telecom regulatory battles last year, an industry analyst noted that there are fewer regulations governing the transport and storage of nuclear material in the U.S. than there are governing telecommunications. That fact is underscored by the sheer number of approvals required for two of the industry's major players - SBC and AT&T - to merge. The good news is, less than four months after the announcement, we've made significant progress, and we expect to close the merger by the end of the year or early next year. Here's an update on our progress.

State by state

In order for the combined company to conduct business within their borders, we were required to file applications for approval in 24 states and the District of Columbia. By mid-May we had completed the process and cleared regulatory hurdles in 10 of those states. (click here for details).

Every state is different, so our process for obtaining approvals had to be customized. For example, the California Public Utilities Commission will hold over a week of hearings with cross-examination of witnesses, as well as seven public hearings, followed by written briefs on the merger. Other states, like New Jersey and Pennsylvania, will conduct a few days of hearings followed by written briefs, and still others will rule after comments and reply comments.

In addition to these 24 states and the District of Columbia, 12 other states required us to notify them of our intent to merge. That process is complete, and we have cleared regulatory hurdles in all 12.

Federal and International

Edgar Filing: AT&T CORP - Form 425

At the federal level, the Federal Communications Commission typically completes its merger review process within 180 days from the issuance of the public notice seeking comments on the application for approval, which in our case began in early March.

Accordingly, we believe that the FCC will approve the merger in early September.

In addition, the Justice Department also conducts a separate review of the merger, and we expect a decision from the department at about the same time as the FCC.

Unlike SBC's previous mergers, this one also requires the approval of several foreign countries.

Competition filings, similar to our Justice Department filing in the United States, are required in Estonia, Brazil, Germany, Austria, Norway, Mexico and South Africa. Through mid-May, all except Brazil and Mexico had approved the merger.

A regulatory filing similar to our FCC filing is also required in Australia. That process is complete, and Australia has approved the merger.

Work is also under way to secure license transfers in Singapore, Brazil, Israel, Pakistan, Turkey, India and Mexico. And informational letters, similar to the notification letters we sent to certain states, have gone out to Russia, the United Kingdom and Hong Kong.

Keeping track of all of these approval requirements is a huge job, but at SBC it's being done with discipline and a sense of urgency.

Meanwhile

As work continues to close the AT&T merger, we're also making progress on SBC Project Lightspeed, our $4 billion capital initiative to build an advanced, IP-based network to deliver IP-based TV, super high-speed broadband and IP voice services by deploying fiber-to-the-neighborhood and fiber-to-the-premises technologies. We expect the network to reach approximately 18 million households by the first half of 2008 as part of our initial deployment.
