VODAFONE & DECHO PARTNER TO DELIVER PC BACKUP SERVICES

Vodafone customers to be offered secure, offsite protection and access to their PC s digital files over fixed and mobile broadband connections

NEWBURY and SEATTLE October 13, 2009 Vodafone has formed a strategic partnership with Decho Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of EMC, to develop a range of cloud-based services for both business customers and consumers.

Vodafone PC Backup will enable customers to simply and securely back up work-related or personal digital content from their computer to a remotely hosted site. Once a customer has backed-up their digital content they know it is protected and that they will always be able to access it, even if their primary device is lost, stolen or otherwise unavailable.

Customers will also be able to view and share the content from their account via the web browser of a PC, laptop or netbook in the future, reducing the need to transfer content from one device to another.

Both business and consumer versions of the services will be introduced, with the former supported by a web-based management console to enable an administrator to centrally control storage allocations and policies for multiple users.

The PC Backup capabilities join Vodafone s PC and mobile anti-virus protection in a suite which makes it simple and secure for customers to use fixed and mobile broadband services to access, organize, protect and share digital content.

Customers will be able to use Vodafone PC Backup over both fixed and mobile broadband connections via the web browser of desktop PCs, laptops, and netbooks.

Edgar Filing: VODAFONE GROUP PUBLIC LTD CO - Form 6-K

The service will be introduced across a number of Vodafone's major European markets throughout the remainder of this calendar year and builds upon the Mozy online backup service operated by Decho.

Our customers are often using a range of connected devices each day, with different information and data contained on each one, said Huw Medcraft, Director of Mobile Broadband, Vodafone. Vodafone PC Backup will enable them to centrally store this content, providing users with the added reassurance that as a Vodafone customer their files – be they critical work documents for businesses or family photographs – will be there when they need it and accessible through a variety of devices and across both fixed and mobile networks.

The explosive growth in both business and consumer information is driving demand for new personal cloud services to help people protect, organize and enrich their most valuable information, commented Harel Kodesh, CEO of Decho Corporation. Building on the proven Mozy online backup service will differentiate Vodafone's services and make it easier for millions of people to access and manage the information they need to do their job or run their lives each day.
