Cooper Standard Names Stephenson Chief Operating Officer

NOVI, Mich. Dec. 15, 2010 Cooper-Standard Holdings Inc., the parent company of Cooper Standard-Automotive Inc., today announced the appointment of Keith D. Stephenson as chief operating officer reporting directly to Cooper Standard's chairman and chief executive officer, James S. McElya. Stephenson was previously serving as president of Cooper Standard's International division, located in the company's European headquarters in Mannheim, Germany. He will relocate to the company's world headquarters in Novi, Michigan in the first half of 2011, assuming the responsibilities now held by Edward Hasler, the company's president. Hasler has announced his retirement from the company, effective July 1, 2011. He will continue to have responsibility for the company's North American operations during the transition period.

I want to thank Ed Hasler for his many years of outstanding service which will continue to benefit Cooper Standard during the transition period leading to his retirement. His industry expertise and ability to instill operational excellence across all of our manufacturing facilities helped Cooper Standard become a leading global supplier, McElya said. At the same time, I look forward to working with Keith in his new post as COO, as he will bring a great mix of international experience, industry expertise and product knowledge to the position. Additionally, as part of the company's succession planning, Keith has assembled a strong global team, ensuring experienced leadership across all our operations.

As president of Cooper Standard's International Division, a position he had held since March 2009, Stephenson had responsibility for all of Cooper Standard's manufacturing and commercial activities in Europe, Asia, South America. From 2007 until March 2009 when the Company reorganized its operations into geographic units, he served as president of Cooper Standard's Body and Chassis Division.
