PURSUANT TO RULE 425 UNDER THE SECURITIES ACT OF 1933

SUBJECT COMPANY: ASTRAZENECA PLC

COMMISSION FILE NO. 001-11960

Dear WRD Colleagues,

Following Ian Read's message this morning, I wanted to reach out to you directly to provide perspective about a potential combination with AstraZeneca. As Ian's letter references, there has been much chatter and speculation in the media about Pfizer's commitment to R&D, assuming a potential combination with AstraZeneca goes forward.

Having lived through five large mergers and acquisitions in my career, I can share this is not unusual. Comments regarding our future are most frequently made by people removed from our strategy, or advocating for a competing interest.

I think it is important to remind ourselves that after a focused effort, we are at a critical juncture in our R&D turnaround journey, and are beginning to see the fruits of our labor. Ian's First Imperative, fixing our innovative core has been our focus and inherent in everything we do every day. This success is also driven by a much deeper business discipline and rigor in R&D, a rigorous portfolio management system to ensure we select only the most high-value programs and prioritized key therapeutic areas where Pfizer has a competitive advantage.

We've made investments in key capabilities and talent to ensure we are accessing the most promising new science. One example is our decision to realign our research footprint around key bio-innovation hubs in Boston, Cambridge, UK, California and New York.

We have also advanced cutting-edge platforms across biologics, vaccines and small molecule drugs and increasingly are combining these modalities in innovative next-generation therapies such as Antibody Drug Conjugates. Our earlier stage portfolio is about 50% biologics and vaccines which we think is the right mix.

Lastly, we've been leaders in defining new models for collaboration this includes our Centers for Therapeutic Innovation, where we work collaboratively with leading academic scientists at 20 institutes, supporting about 25 programs.

As you likely saw last week, we've updated and enhanced the materials outlining our WRD strategy for colleagues. Now feels like an appropriate moment to take the time to review these materials to remind us what is underpinning the work we do every day. A link to the WRD Three Horizons Resource Center is available here.

I am extremely proud of the work we have done transforming our science, technical and business strategy. This has paid off with a pipeline of increasing strength marked by 13 approvals, 13 Phase 3 starts and 13 POC's in the last 3-4 years. This focus has allowed us to be stronger contributors to the health innovation environment.

Our position of strength allows us the flexibility to look for opportunities to accelerate our growth and enhance our overall pipeline position through a strategic combination. I believe a potential combination with AstraZeneca would leave us with one of the industry's best pipelines and the right opportunities for diversification.

The three complementary areas between our portfolio and AstraZeneca's pipeline (oncology, inflammation, and cardiovascular/metabolic) have the potential to bring more benefits to patients, enable us to advance the best candidates, and pursue drug combinations which means greater value for investors.

In addition we have vaccines, neuroscience, pain, and rare diseases, and there are a few other interesting projects also in AstraZeneca that I believe we could rapidly advance by combining expertise from the two companies.

As you know, we have demonstrated our ability to bring together complex R&D organizations, focused on results, building the best expertise in small molecules, biologicals and vaccines. We did it with Wyeth, where within 100 days we had an organization up and running.

During this time, my request of you is to stay focused on the goal of delivering innovative therapies to patients in need. Based on my prior experience, we have the right strategy, culture, skills and people to do that. In return, I will commit to providing timely and transparent updates as this situation continues to evolve.

You will soon be receiving an invitation to participate in a WebEx meeting later this week. I look forward to the opportunity to discuss this situation further with you.

Kind Regards,

Mikael
