Dell-EMC Announcement Highlights

Michael S. Dell, MSD Partners and Silver Lake are leading a transaction to combine Dell and EMC, creating the world's largest privately-controlled, integrated technology company. As part of the transaction, VMware will remain a publicly-traded company.

Following completion of the transaction, Michael Dell will lead the combined company as chairman and chief executive officer. Joe Tucci will continue as chairman and chief executive officer of EMC until the transaction closes.

This transaction will create a leader in the extremely attractive high-growth areas of the $2 trillion information technology market and will be exceptionally well-positioned for growth in the most strategic areas of next generation IT including digital transformation, software-defined data center, converged infrastructure, hybrid cloud, mobile and security

The new company of strategically-aligned businesses will bring together Dell and EMC's respective strong capabilities and complementary portfolios, sales teams and R&D. Plus Dell's strength with small business and mid-market customers and EMC's strength with large enterprises is expected to fuel profitable growth and generate significant cash flows across a wider market.

Dell's privately-controlled ownership structure will give EMC the same flexibility enjoyed by Dell, to focus 100% on customers and invest for long-term results by incubating our most promising high-growth businesses, enabling further innovation and customer choice, and increasing our ability to attract and retain world-class talent.

As one of the strategically aligned businesses, this deal is expected to accelerate VMware's growth and VMware will continue providing customers value through leading software-defined datacentre technology, together with its hybrid cloud, mobile and desktop offerings.

We expect that the combination of Dell and EMC will enable us to innovate at the fast pace our customers expect so we can support them in lowering their IT costs and improving their agility through hybrid cloud environments as well as ultimately helping them to digitally transform their businesses. For partners, we remain committed to our relationships and we continue to be committed to investing and strengthening our respective partner ecosystems.

Dell's headquarters will remain in Austin, Texas with the headquarters of the enterprise systems business of the combined company in Hopkinton, Massachusetts. The enterprise systems business is expected to be over $30 billion in size.

Until the transaction closes, we must continue to run our business with the same dedication and commitment that we show today. Do not reach out to your Dell counterparts unless through the ordinary course of business.

Details of the Transaction

Under the terms of the agreement, EMC shareholders will receive $24.05 per share in cash in addition to tracking stock linked to a portion of EMC's economic interest in the VMware business. Based on the estimated number of EMC shares outstanding at the close of the transaction, EMC shareholders are expected to receive approximately 0.111 shares of new tracking stock for each EMC share. Assuming, for illustrative purposes, a valuation for each share of tracking stock of $81.78, the intraday volume-weighted average price for VMware on Wednesday, October 7, 2015, EMC shareholders would receive a total combined consideration of $33.15 per EMC share. The expected value of the tracking stock consideration will fluctuate based on a number of factors, including changes in the value of VMware common stock.

The total transaction is valued at approximately $67 billion.

There are more details on how the tracking stock works and what happens to EMC employee equity in the FAQs which can also be found on [internal link]. But in summary, all existing stock options, restricted stock and RSUs will vest upon close of the transaction.

The transaction is expected to close in mid-2016 and is subject to customary conditions, including receipt of required regulatory and EMC stockholder approvals.
